Executive Summary:

Al-Nusra Front is an internationally sanctioned terrorist group, the second-strongest insurgent group in Syria after ISIS, and a formerly open al-Qaeda affiliate that seeks to replace the Assad regime in Syria with an Islamic state. Operating as part of the Hayat Tahrir al-Sham (HTS) coalition since January 2017,⁴¹ al-Nusra Front stands accused of serving as a base for global al-Qaeda operations.⁴² In the years since its formation in 2011, the Front has gradually amassed and maintained control of territory throughout Syria.⁴³ As of late 2019, the Front controls or administers all of the Syrian opposition-held parts of Idlib, north Hama, and west Aleppo.⁴⁴

Originally al-Qaeda's official affiliate in Syria, al-Nusra Front has since claimed to have dissociated entirely from the international terrorist organization, despite the Front's long and proven history of serving as its loyal affiliate. On July 28, 2016, al-Qaeda released an audio statement giving the Front formal permission to break ties if the link was "conflicting with [the Front's] unity and working as one body."⁴⁵ Al-Nusra Front leader Abu Muhammad al-Golani declared a formal split from al-Qaeda after thanking "our brothers, the commanders of al-Qa'eda..." and announcing the group's name change from Jabhat al-Nusra, Arabic for "the Victory Front", to Jabhat Fateh al-Sham, "the Conquest of the Levant Front."⁴⁶ Analysts had long surmised that a break from al-Qaeda, however artificial, could enable al-Nusra Front to attract more funding from Gulf states like Qatar, consolidate local support, and present itself as a legitimate insurgent group in Syria.⁴⁷

To these ends, al-Nusra Front announced on January 28, 2017, that it would dissolve and be subsumed under a new, larger Syrian Islamist group, Hayat Tahrir al-Sham ("Assembly for the Liberation of the Levant" or HTS).⁴⁸ HTS's initial leader was Hashim al-Sheikh, the former leader of fellow Islamist faction Ahrar al-Sham.⁴⁹ While al-Nusra Front continues to operate under the HTS name, Sheikh resigned from his post on October 1, 2017, and the group has suffered dozens of defections.⁵⁰ Analysts estimated that by September 2017 HTS had reverted back to its core of about 10,000 fighters, most of them belonging to al-Nusra Front.⁵¹ By the end of 2018, HTS had an estimated 15,000 to 20,000 fighters.⁵²

Al-Nusra Front (Hayat Tahrir al-Sham)

For years before the announced split, however, Golani had reaffirmed his group's allegiance to al-Qaeda. Al-Nusra Front's founder, the late ISIS leader Abu Bakr al-Baghdadi, claimed he dispatched Golani and others—then al-Qaeda in Iraq (AQI) fighters—into Syria in 2011 in order to exploit the power vacuum stemming from the country's civil war.⁵³ The United States confirms this claim, maintaining that that al-Nusra Front was formed by AQI to “hijack the struggles of the legitimate Syrian opposition to further its own extremist ideology.”⁵⁴ In April 2013, after Baghdadi unilaterally claimed to subsume al-Nusra Front into AQI, now known as ISIS, Golani broke ties with Baghdadi and reaffirmed his allegiance to al-Qaeda central.⁵⁵

Despite the group's origins in Iraq and historical deference to al-Qaeda, al-Nusra Front has branded itself as a native rebel group with foreign experience. In Syria, the group continues to profess its goal of toppling the Assad regime and establishing an Islamic state in its place, albeit incrementally. Trying to consolidate local support, al-Nusra Front has adopted military and outreach strategies from al-Qaeda-linked jihadist Abu Musab al-Suri: participating in numerous Syrian-based coalitions and collaborating with other Islamist, and occasionally secular, rebel groups to carry out joint attacks against Assad forces.⁵⁶ Al-Nusra Front, and then HTS, also operated a civil administrative wing, called the “Public Services Administration,” which provided basic administrative needs and security and governed several rebel-controlled towns under various forms of Islamic law.⁵⁷ On November 2, 2017, HTS announced the formation of the “Salvation Government,” a civilian-run administrative and political body in Idlib chaired by Mohammad al-Sheikh. HTS reportedly handed over control of its Public Services Administration to the Salvation Government.⁵⁸

Although the group has succeeded in embedding itself in the Syrian insurgency, al-Nusra Front remains committed to employing terrorist tactics in order to secure an Islamic state. Since its founding, al-Nusra Front has conducted formal military campaigns, assassinations, hostage takings, and ‘lone wolf’ operations, including suicide bombings. By June 2013, the Front had claimed responsibility for 57 out of then-70 suicide attacks during Syria's civil war.⁵⁹ The group has since continued to carry out its signature suicide bombings in Syria and expanded its operations into neighboring Lebanon after Hezbollah joined the war in mid-2013.⁶⁰

In Lebanon, al-Nusra Front works to stoke sectarian divisions, conducting and attempting suicide bombings against civilian centers like Beirut and Hezbollah strongholds like Hermel, along Lebanon's northeastern border with Syria.⁶¹ Al-Nusra Front also employs arbitrary detention and torture in order to silence its critics and opposition activists. According to a Human Rights Watch report, HTS detained more than 184 people in Idlib in the last three months of 2018.⁶² Other human rights organizations accuse HTS of arresting at least 622 people between January 2017 and August 2019.⁶³

The terrorist al-Nusra Front group has attracted the largest contingency of foreign fighters to Syria after ISIS, reportedly consisting of 3,000 to 4,000 foreigners as of late 2018.⁶⁴ The group regularly engages in violent clashes with other rebel groups in northern Syria, and conducts operations to arrest civilian protesters.⁶⁵

Doctrine:

Al-Nusra Front adheres to a Salafist, jihadist ideology with the professed aim of establishing Islamic governance in all areas under its control. In the group's January 2012 inaugural video, a masked representative outlined its regional objectives. He introduced al-Nusra Front as “Syrian mujahedeen” who have come “back from various jihad fronts to restore God's rule on the Earth [Islamic law] and avenge the Syrians' violated honour and spilled blood.”⁶⁶

Years later, when Golani announced al-Nusra Front's dissociation from al-Qaeda, he reaffirmed the group's core objectives, saying that despite separating from al-Qaeda, the group would not be “compromising or sacrificing our solid beliefs or laxity in the necessity of the continuity of the Jihad of Al-Sham [Syria].”⁶⁷ Golani reaffirmed that his group sought to use “Islamically legitimate means” to unify jihadists in Syria and the “masses of people in Al-Sham [Syria]” in order to replace the Assad government with one based on sharia (Islamic law).⁶⁸

Despite these affirmations, al-Nusra Front continues to struggle with its identity. On November 27, 2017, Golani ordered the arrests of Sami al-Oraidi, the former head of al-Nusra Front's Sharia Council; Abu Julaibib al-Ordoni, former Dara'a commander for al-Nusra Front; Abu Khadija al-Ordoni; and Abu Mussaab al-Libi. All four were prominent al-Nusra Front leaders with strong ties to al-Qaeda.⁶⁹ Following these arrests, several HTS members resigned and several large factions threatened to break away, prompting Golani to renew negotiations with al-Qaeda that ultimately led nowhere.⁷⁰ On December 4, 2017, HTS released Ordoni in a bid to ease tensions within the group. Ordoni immediately renewed his pledge to al-Qaeda upon release.⁷¹

Following these arrests, several subgroups of devoted al-Qaeda supporters defected from HTS. On December 5, 2017, HTS faction Jaish al-Badia defected, creating a new Telegram channel devoted to al-Qaeda.⁷² Jaish al-Malahem followed three weeks later, also indicating support for al-Qaeda in its new Telegram channel, while on February 7, 2018, a new al-Qaeda-supporting group, Jund al Shariah, announced its formation.⁷³ On February 28, 2018, these three groups, along with three other small militant factions, announced a merger under the name Hurras al-Deen, or Guardians of the Religion, and declared themselves an unofficial affiliate of al-Qaeda.⁷⁴ Oraidi and Ordoni both joined Hurras al-Deen's Shura council and have reportedly begun talks with al-Qaeda leader Ayman al-Zawahiri to make Hurras al-Deen the official al-Qaeda affiliate in Syria. Hurras al-Deen remains at odds with HTS.⁷⁵

While some Syria analysts argue that this chain of events proves that HTS and al-Nusra Front are no longer al-Qaeda affiliates, the U.S. government maintains that the groups are linked. On May 31, 2018, the State Department amended its classification of HTS to include it as "an official alias" of al-Nusra Front, which the State Department maintains is still "an al-Qaeda affiliate."⁷⁶

As the war against the Syrian regime slowed down and rebel infighting increased in 2018, al-Nusra Front sought to use its recently created Salvation Government, a civilian-run administrative and political body in Idlib chaired by Mohammad al-Sheikh, to exert political control over territory that escaped its military control.⁷⁷ In January 2019, HTS succeeded in using its military power to force all other rebel groups in Idlib, Hama, and Aleppo to either hand direct control of their towns to HTS or to allow the Salvation Government to take over their towns' local councils.⁷⁸

While al-Nusra Front works to establish Islamic law in all areas under its control, it has done so incrementally in order to sustain local support. In this way, the group follows the guidelines and strategy of al-Qaeda-linked writer Abu Musab al-Suri, who sought to win the hearts and minds of locals in order to pursue his Islamist objectives.⁷⁹ In a statement posted online, Golani said, "Beware of being hard on [the locals]. Begin with the priorities and fundamentals of Islam, and be flexible on the minor parts of religion."⁸⁰ In a December 2012 interview with the Dubai-based National, Golani said that his group's "first goal is to get rid of Assad. Then we want a state where the Quran is the only source of law."⁸¹

While al-Nusra Front has generally followed these guidelines, there are several instances where regional leaders have been quick to impose harsh interpretations of Islamic law onto local populations and use violence to force conversions.⁸² In January 2015 in the Druze-dominated Jabal al-Summaq mountain in Idlib province, the Front's then regional emir, Abu Abd al-Rahman al-Tunisi, ordered the local Druze to convert to Sunni Islam and destroyed their shrines.⁸³ Tunisi was removed from his position after al-Nusra Front fighters under his command killed 23 Druze civilians in Qalb Lawza during a land dispute. Although al-Nusra Front reprimanded Tunisi for the massacre, the group upheld the validity of the forced conversions.⁸⁴ Al-Nusra Front has also reportedly imposed smoking bans on areas it controls, forced clothing shops to cover the heads of mannequins, and jailed men and women for socializing together in public.⁸⁵

Although al-Nusra Front publicly emphasizes its Syrian aims, it has shown signs of a more expansionist ideology in line with al-Qaeda's brand of global jihadism. Despite the group's emphasis on its Syrian character, al-Nusra Front expanded its operations into neighboring Lebanon in response to Hezbollah's intervention in Syria.⁸⁶ The group also stands accused of plotting attacks against the West,⁸⁷ seemingly through the elusive Khorasan group, or what one Dubai reporter has exposed as al-Nusra Front's "Wolf Unit."⁸⁸⁸⁹ However, the death of Khorasan commander Said Arif in 2015 signaled the effective end of al-Nusra Front's external operations.⁹⁰ When al-Nusra Front was initially sent to Syria, one of its founding goals was reportedly to establish a safe haven for training recruits and stashing weapons,⁹¹ allegedly on behalf of al-Qaeda in Iraq (now ISIS).⁹²

Organizational Structure:

Al-Nusra Front is both hierarchical and regionalized. Historically, each region has been equipped with an overall leader, a religious leader, and a military commander.⁹³ The group as a whole has been directed by a small consultative council called Majlis-ash-Shura,⁹⁴ and headed by its emir ("commander" or "prince"), Abu Muhammad al-Golani. For years, Golani has carefully avoided showing his face in public, releasing audio statements and providing in-person interviews to news outlets with his face blurred out. In July 2016, however, Golani appeared in a video to announce his group's formal split from al-Qaeda.⁹⁵

Al-Nusra Front had previously pledged allegiance to al-Qaeda⁹⁶ and reported to the latter group's leader, Ayman al-Zawahiri. On July 28, 2016, Zawahiri released an audio statement giving al-Nusra Front formal permission to break ties with al-Qaeda as needed.⁹⁷ Golani accepted the offer, thanking al-Qaeda and its leaders and announcing that the Front no longer had "any affiliation to any external entity."⁹⁸ After claiming to break with al-Qaeda, the Front attempted to merge with other large Islamist opposition groups, including Ahrar al-Sham.⁹⁹ On January 28, 2017, al-Nusra Front announced that it was disbanding as a standalone body and would operate under the banner of HTS, a coalition that combines five major Islamist factions—al-Nusra Front, Harakat Nour al Din al Zenki, Liwa al Haqq, Ansar al Din, and Jaysh al Sunna—along with dozens of smaller Islamist and secular Free Syrian Army groups under one central leadership, with Golani heading its militant branch.¹⁰⁰ However after a series of clashes with other rebel groups in Idlib in July 2017, dozens of factions and leaders defected from HTS, reducing the coalition to a core of al-Nusra Front supporters.¹⁰¹

In early 2017, Golani claimed to have stepped aside from his leadership of al-Nusra Front to defer to Hashim al-Sheikh, leader of the HTS coalition, while Golani became the military commander of the group.¹⁰² However, since Sheikh's resignation in October 2017, Golani has once again served as the undisputed leader of HTS.¹⁰³

According to multiple analyst estimates in 2018, HTS maintains approximately 12,000–20,000 fighters. In contrast, al-Nusra Front had an estimated 5,000–7,000 fighters in 2016.¹⁰⁴ Al-Nusra Front has also attracted the largest contingency of foreign fighters after ISIS.¹⁰⁵ Its militant branch is responsible for conducting coordinated attacks against the Assad regime, loyalists, thugs, and perceived colluders, as well as rival groups like ISIS and secular Free Syrian Army factions. The militant branch also conducts 'lone wolf' operations (including suicide bombings) and hostage missions targeting Lebanese and Syrian civilians.¹⁰⁶

HTS's military was originally separated into four "armies": the Army of Abu Bakr al-Siddiq, the Army of Omar bin al-Khattab, the Army of Othman bin Affan, and the Army of Ali bin Abi Talib.¹⁰⁷ On April 14, 2020, HTS's military wing announced the establishment of three new military brigades: the Talha bin Ubayd Allah Brigade, headed by Abu Hafis Binnish; the Ali bin Abi Talib Brigade, headed by Abu Bakr Muhain; and the al-Zubeir ibn al-Awwam Brigade, headed by Abu Mohammad Shura. These armies consist of anti-armored-vehicles units, machine-gun units, armored-vehicles units, air-reconnaissance units (drone operators), automatic and manual fortification-building units, mortar units, and sniper units.¹⁰⁸ Binnish is reportedly the son-in-law of Golani and has risen quickly throughout the group due to his family connection. HTS issued a statement claiming, "these changes are in line with the preparations of the revolutionary forces on the ground...to rise to the challenges of the revolution and defend the region against the attacks of the occupier and its militias." Since the beginning of 2020, HTS has allegedly had a growing number of defections within its ranks given massive losses in battles against the Syrian government.¹⁰⁹

HTS also operates a special military unit known as the "Red Bands" or "Band of Deaths" that is reportedly responsible for conducting raids behind regime frontlines.¹¹⁰ The group simultaneously stands accused by the U.S. government of plotting attacks against Western targets through its small and secretive "Wolf unit."¹¹¹

In addition to the group's militant branch, al-Nusra Front managed civilian services and administration programs, known as Idarat al-Khidamat al-Ammah (Public Services Administration) and Idarat al-Manateq al-Muharara (Liberated Districts Administration) respectively, to govern areas in northern, western, and southern Syria, alongside other rebel groups.¹¹² Al-Nusra Front's civilian branch has previously operated under the direction of its reported head of civilian programs at the time, Hajji Rasoul.¹¹³ In the past, the program has coordinated bread rations and enforced Islamist regulations on al-Nusra Front's de facto subjects.¹¹⁴ As part of the group's governance program, al-Nusra Front—alongside its allied rebel groups—levy taxes and control the allocation of special permits to civilian vehicles.¹¹⁵

On November 2, 2017, HTS announced the formation of the Salvation Government, a civilian-run administrative and political body in Idlib chaired by Mohammad al-Sheikh. HTS reportedly handed over control of its Public Services Administration to the Salvation Government.¹¹⁶ According to Syrian expert Sam Heller, the Salvation government formed through "a miniature, managed version of an inclusive national dialogue," implying that at least some non-HTS elements are present in the body. However, many analysts and activists believe that the newly formed governing bodies in Idlib are controlled by HTS.¹¹⁷ In January 2019, a ceasefire between HTS and the Turkish-backed rebel alliance National Liberation Front resulted in the Salvation Government taking control of every local council previously under the control or protection of those rebel groups, making HTS the dominant force in Idlib.¹¹⁸

For recruitment and publicity purposes, al-Nusra Front has maintained a media branch called al-Manara al-Bayda ("the White Minaret"), which the group has refrained from using since dissociating from al-Qaeda and merging with HTS.¹¹⁹ This branch had previously maintained the group's public image and media program, disseminating videos and posting statements by the group on jihadist websites, as well as on encrypted messaging applications, video-hosting websites, and social media websites.¹²⁰ HTS has, since its formation in early 2017, begun operating accounts on Twitter¹²¹ ¹²² and Telegram¹²³ ¹²⁴ among other social media platforms, issuing statements, updates, and propaganda materials in a variety of languages including English, Arabic, and Russian.¹²⁵

On October 21, 2020, HTS announced through its Sharia Council that it disavowed Assem Barqawi a.k.a. Abu Muhammad al-Maqqdisi. Al-Maqqdisi is a prominent Salafist ideologue and was a close confidante of al-Qaeda founder Abu Musab al-Zarqawi. Al-Maqqdisi and HTS have been at odds since HTS's split from al-Qaeda in 2016. HTS has distanced itself from al-Maqqdisi as they are seeking to shed their reputation as an extremist group in order to form a political representation bureau in Idlib. Additionally, according to scholars at Jusoor for Studies, a Syrian independent institution based in Turkey, by disavowing al-Maqqdisi, HTS will have a better chance to persuade other military factions to cooperate in a future HTS military council project. The details of the military council project have yet to be disclosed, but will reportedly help deter the presence of the newly formed joint military operations room that includes the al-Qaeda-linked Hurras al-Din, Jamaat Ansar al-Islam, and Jabhat Ansar al-Din, as well as al-Jihad Coordination and al-Muqatileen al-Ansar Brigade, which are recent HTS splinters. The Idlib-focused operations center, "Be Steadfast" was established in June 2020 and is aimed at coordinating efforts to fight against Syrian government troops, its allied forces, and HTS.¹²⁶

Financing:

Al-Nusra Front has been well-funded since its inception in 2011.¹²⁷ By August 2016, the group received streams of funding through a variety of means, including taxation, tariffs, fines, ransoms, international donations, oil sales, looting, and smuggling.¹²⁸ In September 2019, HTS commander Abu al-Abed al-Ashida released a video statement accusing HTS of corrupt internal practices. In the video, Ashida claimed HTS had a monthly income of $13 million.¹²⁹

The most stable source of income for al-Nusra Front is believed to have come from taxes, tariffs, and fines that the group imposes on locals within its territory. Among the taxes levied by the group are income, business, services and utility taxes, including taxes on access to electricity, water, and bread. Al-Nusra Front also reportedly receives funding by leasing out homes, and is even reported to have levied a tax on internally displaced persons within Idlib province.¹³⁰ As HTS came to dominate the rebel pocket in Idlib, the coalition monopolized the agricultural industry. HTS forced farmers to sell them their crops at deflated prices, which HTS then sold to the populace at market rates, allowing HTS to collect the profits.¹³¹ In addition to taxes, al-Nusra Front has seized assets from religious minority groups and receives funding through an arms and weaponry tariff on other rebel groups.¹³² In this way, al-Nusra Front is believed to receive roughly half of the ammunition and weapons sent to the Free Syrian Army in northern Syria.¹³³

Following the formation of the Salvation Government in November 2017, al-Nusra Front began taxing water and electricity usage in the municipalities under its control.¹³⁴ With HTS's complete administrative takeover of greater Idlib in January 2019, the funds provided through taxation are likely to increase substantially. HTS also captured the Bab al-Halwa border crossing between Idlib and Turkey in July 2017, providing an additional taxation source for the terror organization.¹³⁵

Sources of funding for the group also reportedly include private donations from wealthy individuals in Saudi Arabia, Qatar, and Kuwait, who are believed to launder the funds through small money transfers, or by dispatching the money with individuals who cross state borders into al-Nusra-held territory.¹³⁶ Indeed, al-Nusra Front's decision in July 2016 to dissociate from al-Qaeda is widely believed to have been motivated in large part to enable Qatari-based donors to continue sending money to al-Nusra Front without being accused of providing financial support to al-Qaeda.¹³⁷

In addition to foreign donations, al-Nusra Front has also secured revenue from oil sales and smuggling,¹³⁸ as well as through cigarette smuggling and extortion.¹³⁹ Although governments typically deny payment for the release of hostages, al-Nusra Front is believed to have racked up millions of dollars through hostage exchanges negotiated by the Qatari government. In one such exchange, the group reportedly received $4 million when it released four Greek Orthodox nuns in March 2014.¹⁴⁰ In another exchange, al-Nusra Front reportedly received $25 million when it released 45 U.N. peacekeepers.¹⁴¹ U.S. citizen Peter Theo Curtis was believed to have been released in August 2014 in exchange for anywhere between $3 million and $25 million, although the circumstances of Curtis's release were not made public.¹⁴²

Recruitment:

In order to join al-Nusra Front, the group has historically required its recruits to procure tazkiyya (a voucher on behalf of the recruit) from two commanders on the front lines.¹⁴³ Once the recruit was accepted, he would swear bay'ah (an oath of allegiance) to the group, thereby cementing his religious commitment.¹⁴⁴

Al-Nusra Front has also recruited members online and in private messaging applications through its former media branches, al-Minara al-Bayda and

Al-Nusra Front (Hayat Tahrir al-Sham)

Fursan al-Sham media. Within Syria, the group has attracted recruits by appealing to the locals in a strategy adopted from al-Qaeda jihadist Abu Musab al-Suri.¹⁴⁵ When it comes to attracting recruits, al-Nusra Front holds a financial advantage over competing rebel groups, as it has historically been able to provide members with salaries and weapons.¹⁴⁶ Under HTS, a new media outlet has been created, Ebaa Agency, which produces high-quality videos, infographics, and media statements similar to those of Amaq, ISIS's media wing.¹⁴⁷

In addition to recruiting guerilla fighters through online and in-person efforts, al-Nusra Front stands accused of recruiting child soldiers. The U.N. Human Rights Council's Independent Commission on Syria has issued reports on al-Nusra Front's successful recruitment of child soldiers continuing into 2017. In Idlib province, al-Nusra fighters include boys under the age of 18 and 15, with some manning checkpoints.¹⁴⁸ The Commission found that al-Nusra Front specifically targets poor, uneducated boys for recruitment, paying them modest salaries used to support the boys' families.¹⁴⁹

HTS operates recruitment centers in opposition held territory in Aleppo, Idlib, Jabal Zawiya, Atmeh IDP camp, and in the towns along the Turkish border.¹⁵⁰ Recent HTS recruitment campaigns have stipulated that recruits must be 16 years old or older, unmarried, and in good health. Unmarried recruits reportedly receive a monthly salary of 38,000 SYP while married recruits are paid 45,000 SYP.¹⁵¹

Training:

The training process for a new al-Nusra recruit is believed to last for two months. This training includes a 10-day religious course followed by a six to eight military training program with religious lectures every evening.¹⁵² Training reportedly emphasizes small-unit tactics, close combat, assassinations, and raids with exposure to common weapons from AK variants to anti-tank missiles.¹⁵³ Recruits that show exceptional promise during training are selected to join the special operations groups Jaish al-Nusra and Quwat al-Nukhba.¹⁵⁴

Since as far back as 2016, private military contracting company Malhama Tactical has been training al-Nusra Front fighters in special-operation tactics and assisting in developing the small sub-group Quwat al-Nukhba (Elite Forces).¹⁵⁵ Malhama Tactical was founded by an Uzbek veteran of the Russian military known by his pseudonym Abu Rofiq and initially staffed ten trainers, all with military experience from former Soviet states. Abu Rofiq claims to have founded his organization as a for-profit private military contractor that works exclusively with Sunni-Jihadist organizations. Malhama has reportedly been hired to train and fight alongside both al-Nusra Front and the Turkistani Islamic Party in Syria.¹⁵⁶

Al-Nusra Front (Hayat Tahrir al-Sham)

History:

- November 13, 2020: More than 330 Syrian refugees in the U.K. seek legal action against Qatar at the High Court in London. The refugees claim they were tortured at the hands of the Nusra Front, which they also claim is allegedly funded by a Qatar's state-run Doha Bank. Court papers claim the refugees were "victims of terrorism perpetrated by Al Nusra Front in Syria and have been victims of a range of grave human rights violations including torture, summary and arbitrary execution and other violations of the right to life." Doha Bank allegedly worked with Moutaz and Ramez Al Khayyat—wealthy businessmen—to operate a clandestine route for the funding of al-Nusra Front on behalf of the emir of Qatar. The next hearing is scheduled for 2021. Sources: "Qatar faced with legal action from UK court over allegations of Syria militia torture," Middle East Monitor, November 13, 2020, <https://www.middleeastmonitor.com/20201113-qatar-faced-with-legal-action-from-uk-court-over-allegations-of-syria-militia-torture/>; Owen Bowcott, "Qatari officials intimidated claimants in terror case, high court told," Guardian, November 11, 2020, <https://www.theguardian.com/uk-news/2020/nov/11/high-court-hears-claims-qatar-officials-intimidated-terror-case-witnesses>.
- October 21, 2020: HTS announces through its Sharia Council that it disavows prominent Salafist ideologue Assem Barqawi a.k.a. Abu Muhammad al-Maqdisi, who was a close confidante of al-Qaeda founder Abu Musab al-Zarqawi. Al-Maqdisi and HTS have been at odds since HTS's split from al-Qaeda in 2016. HTS has distanced itself from al-Maqdisi as they are seeking to form a political representation bureau in Idlib so that they can participate within the Syrian political system. Additionally, according to scholars at Jusoor for Studies, a Syrian independent institution based in Turkey, by disavowing Maqdisi, HTS will have a better chance to persuade other military factions to cooperate in a future HTS military council project. The military council project will reportedly help deter the presence of the newly formed joint military operations room that includes the al-Qaeda-linked Hurras al-Din, Jamaat Ansar al-Islam, and Jabhat Ansar al-Din, as well as al-Jihad Coordination and the al-Muqatileen al-Ansar Brigade, which are recent HTS splinters. The Idlib-focused operations center, "Be Steadfast" was established in June 2020 and is aimed at coordinating efforts to fight against Syrian government troops, its allied forces, and HTS. Sources: Sultan al-Kanj, "Syrian extremist group in Idlib breaks with jihadist ideologue," Al-Monitor, October 21, 2020, <https://www.al-monitor.com/pulse/originals/2020/10/syria-hayat-tahrir-al-sham-relations-al-qaeda-jihadis.html#ixzz6bcn6ts00>; Sirwan Kajjo, "Jihadists in Syria's Idlib Form New 'Operations Room'," Voice of America, June 15, 2020, <https://www.voanews.com/extremism-watch/jihadists-syrias-idlib-form-new-operations-room>.
- August 13, 2020: HTS detains American journalist Bilal Abdul Kareem in Atmeh, northwest Syria. For the past eight years, Kareem has reported from Syria's north, where HTS has a shrinking presence. According to media sources, Kareem was arrested due to an interview he published on the case of Tauqir Sharif—an aid worker who was detained by HTS in June 2020—which insinuated the group tortured and arbitrarily arrested Sharif. - July 13, 2020: German federal prosecutors arrest Khedr A.K. and Sami A.S. in Naumburg, eastern Germany, for their involvement in the killing of an army officer in Syria in 2012. Khedr A.K. is allegedly a member of al-Nusra Front, and Sami A.S. is reportedly a supporter of the group. The 2012 execution was filmed and prepared as footage for propaganda. - June 28, 2020: HTS launches a military campaign against rival jihadist groups in Idlib. According to the war monitor group, Syrian Observatory, HTS fighters have raided villages in Idlib and have arrested multiple jihadist militants, including a leader in Hurras al-Din. - On March 2, U.N. Human Rights Council investigators find that HTS committed war crimes, namely, at least one execution. On March 5, Russia and Turkey agree to a ceasefire in northwestern Syria, including HTS-ruled Idlib, the last holdout of rebel control. The deal requires Turkey to reduce the power of HTS. HTS thanks Turkey for its "clear support for the Syrian revolution," but says the agreement is "tainted by ambiguity and unclear statements that allow the Russian occupier to make use of it for new aggression. It also contains provisions that cannot be applied at all, but are rather an insult to the blood of martyrs and the sacrifices made over ten years." - - : HTS clashes with other rebel coalitions and attempts to expand its presence in Damascus, Idlib, and in southern Syria.
In April and July, the group engages in fierce clashes with competing rebel faction Jaish al-Islam in the East Ghouta pocket of Damascus. During this time, HTS also engages in efforts to expand their presence in the south, including in Dara’a and Quneitra governorates, near the Golan Heights. In July, war breaks out between HTS and Ahrar al-Sham in Idlib. After initial gains by Ahrar al-Sham, HTS captures several towns and encircles the crucial Bab al-Hawa border crossing before a ceasefire takes hold. Al-Nusra Front (Hayat Tahrir al-Sham)

Violent history:

Al-Nusra Front conducted its first attack on December 23, 2011, detonating two car bombs outside a government security office in Damascus and killing 44.¹⁵⁷ In the following months the Front drastically increased the frequency and types of attacks carried out against the Assad regime, setting itself apart from other rebel groups with the large number of suicide bombings it conducted. As al-Nusra Front seized and held territory, it began to attack civilians, minorities, and other rebel groups. After Hezbollah's intervention in Syria on behalf of the Assad regime in mid-2013, al-Nusra Front expanded its operations into Lebanon.¹⁵⁸ While the Front's attacks in Lebanon largely ended by mid-2015, the group still conducts violent activities in Syria's southern governorates of Dara'a and Quneitra, in the Eastern Ghouta pocket of Damascus, and in the rebel-held areas of Idlib, Hama, and Aleppo

Al-Nusra Front (Hayat Tahrir al-Sham)

Associations:

Ties to Extremist Entities:

Al-Qaeda

ISIS

Al-Nusra Front has a long and proven history of serving as al-Qaeda’s loyal affiliate in Syria. In July 2016, however, al-Qaeda leader Ayman al-Zawahiri released an audio statement giving al-Nusra Front formal permission to break ties with al-Qaeda if the link was “conflicting with [al-Nusra Front’s] unity and working as one body.”³⁶⁷ Hours later, al-Nusra Front leader Abu Muhammad al-Golani formally severed ties with al-Qaeda’s central command.³⁶⁸ Analysts have long surmised that a formal, or at least artificial, break from al-Qaeda could allow al-Nusra Front the opportunity to attract more funding from Gulf states, consolidate local support, and present itself as a legitimate insurgent group in Syria.³⁶⁹ Even as al-Nusra Front formally declared its independence from al-Qaeda, the group thanked al-Qaeda’s leadership for giving “priority to the interests of the people of Al-Sham, their Jihad, [and] their revolution.”³⁷⁰

Al-Nusra Front was allegedly formed as an extension of al-Qaeda in Iraq (AQI, now ISIS), and received a monthly salary from AQI leader Abu Bakr al-Baghdadi.³⁷⁶ The relationship between the groups deteriorated in April 2013, when Baghdadi unilaterally announced a merger between the two groups.³⁷⁷ The two have since engaged in violent clashes, vying for control over rebel-held territory.

Yet recent insights have brought into question the artificiality of al-Nusra Front’s break from al-Qaeda. According to al-Qaeda scholar Cole Bunzel, there has been a “profound controversy in jihadi circles surrounding the nature of [HTS], which some argue has lost its way.”³⁷¹ Among the many critics of HTS is al-Qaeda propagandist Abu Muhammad al-Maqdisi. In November 2016, Maqdisi withdrew his support for al-Nusra Front’s break from al-Qaeda, stating that his and Zawahiri’s approval came only on the condition that any such break would be a “superficial step.”³⁷² Instead, Maqdisi claimed that al-Nusra Front’s leadership continued to deviate from al-Qaeda’s central tenets, stating that they “stayed the course till they made it a real breaking of ties” from al-Qaeda.³⁷³ Maqdisi and other al-Qaeda hardliners have denounced HTS’s outreach to secular and moderate Islamist rebel factions.³⁷⁴

For years before the announcement, however, al-Nusra Front had reaffirmed its allegiance to Zawahiri, even in the face of competing claims to its leadership. In April 2013, after Baghdadi unilaterally claimed that al-Nusra Front answered to his al-Qaeda in Iraq group (now ISIS), Golani broke ties with ISIS and affirmed its allegiance to al-Qaeda central.³⁷⁵

Media Coverage:

Qatar and the Nusra Front

Qatar stands accused of supporting and funding the Nusra Front.³⁷⁸ The Qatari government helped broker the release of 13 nuns kidnapped by the group in December 2013. It brokered the August 2014 release of American hostage Peter Theo Curtis, as well as the September 2014 release of 45 U.N. peacekeepers.

On the release of the 45 U.N. peacekeepers, Qatar's state-owned Al Jazeera called the peacekeepers "Fijian soldiers" that were kidnapped and "held" for two weeks by the Nusra Front. The article emphasizes that the peacekeepers were reportedly in good condition and notes, "A UN spokesman said in New York on Thursday no ransom had been requested for the Fijian peacekeepers and none was paid."³⁷⁹

Nonetheless, rumors that Qatar paid the group a ransom fee soon circulated. Qatar's foreign minister denied the claims,³⁸⁰ but Israel's Channel 2 news station released video footage allegedly showing that Qatar paid the group $25 million in ransom.³⁸¹

Al Jazeera did not cover any follow-ups to the story, including the Channel 2 report and the foreign minister's statement. The Al Jazeera article regarding the release of the peacekeepers ends by highlighting Qatar's seemingly helpful role in the hostage release process: "US officials have said that Qatar played a critical role in persuading the Nusra Front to free American journalist Peter Theo Curtis last month, whom the front had been holding hostage since 2012."³⁸²

The Syrian Observatory for Human Rights on the Nusra Front

The Syrian Observatory for Human Rights (SOHR) is a pro-opposition monitoring group. A score of mainstream Western and Arabic media outlets rely on SOHR for on-site data. Although the monitoring group is pro-opposition, it tends to make a noticeable distinction between the Nusra Front and other rebel groups, and has acknowledged the group's links to al-Qaeda as far back as November 2012.³⁸³ The group frequently uses descriptors like "radical"³⁸⁴ and "extremist,"³⁸⁵ in addition to "al-Qaeda-linked"³⁸⁶ and "al-Qaeda loyalist," when describing the Nusra Front.³⁸⁷

The Nusra Front Pledges Allegiance to Al-Qaeda

On April 10, 2013, Nusra Front leader Abu Mohammed al-Golani released a statement rejecting Abu Bakr al-Baghdadi's claim that al-Qaeda in Iraq and the Nusra Front had merged. In the statement, al-Golani pledged his allegiance to al-Qaeda's leader, Ayman al-Zawahri.

The New York Times covered al-Baghdadi's announcement, but did not immediately address al-Golani's response, including his public pledge of fealty to Ayman al-Zawahiri.³⁸⁸ The Wall Street Journal covered both al-Baghdadi's claim and al-Golani's response in one article titled, "Al Qaeda Declares Stake in Syrian Rebellion." Its author, Nour Malas, predicted that al-Qaeda's now-open involvement in Syria would bring a schism to the rebel movement.³⁸⁹

Al Jazeera reported on al-Baghdadi's April 9 declaration,³⁹⁰ as well as al-Golani's pledge of allegiance to al-Qaeda leader Ayman al-Zawahri.³⁹¹ The article on al-Golani's response seemed to cover the announcement with a number of qualifiers: "A man claiming to be the head of a key group fighting the Syrian government has purportedly pledged allegiance to al-Qaeda..."³⁹² In covering the Nusra Front's declaration of allegiance to Ayman al-Zawahiri, CNN seemed to temper al-Golani's pledge of allegiance to al-Qaeda by emphasizing that al-Golani had rejected the merger with al-Qaeda in Iraq and stated his intention to continue cooperating with other rebel groups. The article opens: "A Syrian jihadist group appears to have pledged allegiance to al Qaeda's leader—but also stressed it can achieve a Syrian Islamic state only by working with other rebels, including secularists. The group, al-Nusra Front, also denies an earlier claim that it has merged with Iraq's al Qaeda affiliate, according to an audio message purported to be from al-Nusra general commander Abu Muhammad al-Joulani."³⁹³

Responses to U.S. Designation of the Nusra Front

On December 10, 2012, the U.S. listed the Nusra Front as an alias for al-Qaeda in Iraq (now ISIS). The designation was met with a mixed response from Western and Arab media outlets. In the aftermath of the designation through December 2012, Al Jazeera published 14 articles that mentioned the Nusra Front. Seven of the articles qualified the U.S. designation by putting ‘terrorist’ or ‘terrorist organization’ in quotation marks.³⁹⁴ Three referenced the designation without the quotation marks, while the remaining four did not reference the designation at all.³⁹⁵ In an op-ed titled “The ‘War on Terror’ and the Arab Spring,” Al Jazeera correspondent Mark Perry claimed that the U.S. designation reflects “a profound misunderstanding” of current events in the Arab world. Perry recommends that “Instead of being afraid, we should be filled with pride: These people are so dedicated to the idea of liberty that they’re actually fighting for it.”³⁹⁶ The New York Times did not use quotation marks to describe the terrorist designation,³⁹⁷ nor did *The Wall Street Journal*³⁹⁸ or The Washington Post.³⁹⁹

In Time’s first article covering the terrorist designation, the author put ‘terrorist’ in quotation marks while describing the designation.⁴⁰⁰ The article’s sub-headline states, “One of the most effective anti-Assad militias has just been designated a ‘terrorist’ organization by the U.S.”⁴⁰¹

Rhetoric:

Abu Muhammad al-Golani, January 14, 2019

“We consider the PKK to be an enemy of this revolution. It controls areas inhabited by large numbers of Sunni Arabs... We are in favor of this region being liberated from the PKK ... We would not stand in the way of an operation against an enemy of the revolution.”⁴⁰²

Abu al-Fatah al-Farghali, January 15, 2019

“HTS can’t strive to obstruct the liberation of Sunni Muslims [east of the Euphrates] from the rule of the atheists [YPG/SDF] even if that is at hands of the secularists [Turkey] less far from the religion.”⁴⁰³

Abu Muhammad al-Golani, August 22, 2018

“The weapons of the revolution and jihad... are a red line on which concessions are unacceptable, and they will never be put on the negotiations table... We urge our people in Aleppo to remain steadfast. The mujahideen will not fail you.”⁴⁰⁴

Abu Muhammad al-Golani, August 2018

“The red line [ceasefire deal between Turkey and Russia] is never negotiable and will never be put on the negotiating table.”⁴⁰⁵

Abu Muhammad al-Golani, January 2018

“[We must engage in] a war of ideas, a war of minds, a war of wills, a war of perseverance.”⁴⁰⁶
